

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An infrared steering method for controlling a plurality of infrared units being controlled with a plurality of infrared controllers, characterized in that the infrared controller compares the time interval between the end of a start signal and the start of a steering signal being transmitted with a predetermined time interval specific to each infrared unit being controlled and identifies a matching signal as a signal for the infrared unit being controlled.